At the Country Club.

Hundreds of handsomely gowned women thronged the country club of the Virginia Country Club of Virginia yesterday afternoon and evening for the annual lawn fete that takes place there annually. The clubhouse was beautifully decorated everywhere in garden flowers and palms, and the long tables in the dining-room, from which a buffet supper was served, were festooned with ribbon. This affair is always given in honor of the visiting players here for the Old Dominion Tennis Tournament, and practically the entire membership of the club attends it. Interested galleries of spectators have been at the club each afternoon this week to witness the tournament, and many pretty summer gowns and hats have been in evidence. An orchestra played for the informal dancing last evening, and punch was served in the palm room.

The affair is for the benefit of Pine Camp, and has become an annual entertainment to which numbers of Richmond people go every year. All sorts of attractive features have been arranged for the entertainment to-day, and all interested are invited to attend. The grounds of the Sampson home will be hung with summer flowers, bright-colored lights and lanterns, and rustic tables and chairs will be scattered about everywhere to accommodate those in attendance.

It was the most elaborate wedding of the season. A brilliant reception followed at the Burton, after which the bride and groom left for a tour in Canada.

FREE COOKING SCHOOL COMES TO END TO-DAY

Last Demonstration This Afternoon at The Times-Dispatch Booth, Manufacturers' Exhibit.

MANY HEAR DESSERT RECIPES

Largest Audience of Week Grooms Mrs. Florence Austin Chase, Domestic Economy Demonstrator.

To-day is the last day of the free cooking school that has been held all week at The Times-Dispatch booth in the Manufacturers' Exhibit, Sixth and Main Streets, under the direction of Mrs. Florence Austin Chase, a widely-known and celebrated lecturer on domestic economy and cooking demonstration. The whole series of lectures has been absolutely free to the public, and the most successful demonstration and nothing sold. The demonstration this afternoon will begin promptly at 3 o'clock and last until 5.

Yesterday the largest audience of the week was present, and many people stood throughout the entire time in order to witness Mrs. Chase's display of dainty and delicious desserts, as well as to hear her suggestions for entertaining to beautiful roses and ferns, through the courtesy of the Hammond Company, florists, who also allowed Mrs. Chase the use of their booth for the cooking class, and the excellent water furnished by the Broad Rock Springs, which is there for the refreshment of the audience, was selected by the lecturer after a visit to the spring. Quite a number of prominent housekeepers were noted as before, and nearly all of them have been in attendance upon the whole series. They have learned a lot of things there that they would never get in books, because it has been practical, economical and instructive from beginning to end. Mrs. Chase has taught her audience more than one point about using leftovers and combining recipes to the best advantage and, like the knife and King of ancient lore, "what they did not eat that day, the Queen next morning fried." She has shown in the use of all her recipes the most economical and edible way of preparing food.

USES RICHMOND-MADE PRODUCTS IN RECIPES.

In the number of pretty and appetizing desserts, quickly prepared and daintily served yesterday morning, Mrs. Chase used the Sauers extracts for all of her flavoring, and all sorts of fascinating concoctions were arranged. A shortcake, made with Dunlop Superfine Flour and Good Luck Baking Powder, whipped cream over fruits and puddings, demonstrated with the cream from the Richmond Dairy Company; a delicious cooling raspberry ice, made in a Richmond-manufactured freezer and concocted from the Monogram Brand canned raspberries; pineapple-whip, lemon sponge-cakes, fruit jellies and many others were shown. She said that you had no idea the many people who were actually unable to put a bowl of dessert together. The desserts were reasonable and beautifully arranged, and the speaker dwelt at length upon the stirring, mixing, boiling and other processes that are so often Greek to the new housewife.

The large audience present received with the greatest enthusiasm and a round of applause Mrs. Chase's very complimentary remarks concerning the products of this city used by her in this cooking class, and after the class was concluded, many crowded about the platform to examine more closely the Tiptop Gas Range, made here; the White House Kitchen Cabinet and Sanitary Table, and the big refrigerator furnished by Sydnor & Hundley, as well as the steamers and bakers and coffee percolators furnished by the E. B. Taylor Company, and the pans and kettles of the Central Hardware Company. Tea made by the Virginia Dare people was served during the afternoon.

Domestic science is making rapid strides among the better class of women everywhere, and mothers want their daughters to know how to manage their homes and their housekeeping to the best advantage. They are waking up to the knowledge that a leak in the home is bad for the business, and that the same system is needed for the United States as for the kitchen and father and mother using in their big downtown business. Women must not only know how to cook, to manage and buy, but where to buy, how to buy and what kind to buy.

TELLS HOW TABLE SHOULD BE SET.

The afternoon's lecture was concluded with a minute description of the proper way to set a table for a formal dinner or luncheon, the sort of forks and spoons to use, correct linens and other details dear to the heart of the entertainer. Mrs. Chase gave interesting descriptions of color schemes in flowers, place cards and menu and one of the most novel favors was for an engagement announcement luncheon, where the hostess marked the places of her guests with small satin bags. When the bags were opened, miniature cats came out with the names of the prospective bride and groom tied about their necks.

She worked out a number of fancy salads and desserts and gave for general use at entertainments of numerous kinds, and gave various items about the construction of sandwiches and such to serve with them. Mrs. Chase's excellent advice to the housekeeper and home makers was to have a day for everything and everything done; a place for everything and everything in its place, with the concluding grace of cheerfulness at meal time and pastries.

This afternoon will be the last lecture of this interesting and splendid demonstration, and the hall will be thronged with women to hear the discussion upon cakes, icing, filling and pastries.

Wohr-Winter.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.] Lynchburg, Va., June 4.—Last evening at the home of Mrs. M. M. Winter, 619 Harrison Street, her daughter, Miss Nina Louise Winter, was married to Clarence R. Wohr, who was formerly a resident of Lancaster, Pa. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Claudius P. Smith, rector of Grace Memorial Episcopal Church. Miss Florence Voigt, of Roanoke, was the maid of honor, and C. M. Shepherd, of Lynchburg, was the best man.

After a trip to Lancaster, Pa., Mr. and Mrs. Wohr will reside here.

Homely, Yet Admired and Envied; Her Secret

The convention crowd made a path for her, cast admiring side glances, then with longing eyes followed her to the elevator. It was at the Ponchartraine in Detroit. The incident was recalled when I chanced to sit in a table from the woman. What was it about her that caused all that commotion? Her complexion. Really. I've never beheld a more equal. I learned the secret. I've tried to make the most of my own charm," she said. "I know men who make-ups and artificiality. I bar cosmetics; there are two ways to promote natural loveliness and youthful appearance. When my complexion begins to age, I get an ounce of uncolored wax at the drug store, in the morning. This gradually flakes off the outer skin, then I have a new complexion, magnetically beautiful, as you see."

Wrinkles never bother me. At their inception I bathe my face in a solution made by dissolving an ounce of borax in a half pint of witch hazel. It works like magic."—Mona Morrow in Tattler.—Advertisement.

Of Interest to Every Woman

SOME NOVELTIES IN FOOTWEAR

Many Styles, Color Combinations and Leather Are Used—Suitable for the Dance.

It is unquestionably due to the new dances that milady's foot is so much in evidence and so exquisitely covered. This year offers as no other has many, many novelties in footwear.

In this array there are many styles, color combinations and leathers, though patent leather or patent leather combinations rank first in popularity. There is the patent leather colonial with the cut steel or leather-covered buckle, there is the pump of former years with the grosgrain bow, which most deservedly is popular again.

Then we find a new strap pump in patent leather, finished with cut steel ornaments.

In the combinations the patent leather is usually confined to the vamp, though we see it used for tongues and binding edges. Celluloid, which resembles patent leather, is used for the heels. The quarters are made of oze and suede, black or colored, of brocade, in colors or combinations, such as black and gold, and also of materials to match one's costumes.

Other leathers for this season are of a very much bestrapped slipper studded with steel beads, gun metal, tan and brown leather.

Brown leather oxfords trimmed with tan leather are very popular in Paris at present.

Blackskin, which has been in vogue for the past few years, is now much used except in white. In this it will be very popular, and the pumps are quite fetching this year.

Milady will be delighted with the "all-white" shoes, the soles and welts are of white leather, made so by the process of chromed tanning. Velvet, satin and brocades are very much used for evening slippers. The popular colors this year are as varied as milady's wardrobe.

The designs are many, and the new tango slipper or coturne will bring joy to the heart of the tango enthusiasts, for they are not only those exquisitely dainty ones for evening, but also sturdy ones for daytime, with a military heel.

The oxford and the sailor tie are again with us, while the pump and colonial appear in many variations for both morning and evening wear.

Buckles and ornaments are very important features of this season's footwear. They are made of cut steel, jet, rhinestones, semiprecious and even precious stones, and are adapted to the different styles, according to the time of day when worn. The designs seem endless, inspired in many instances by birds, bees, butterflies and flowers, and offer a bewildering array.

An Ironing Hint.

Fold a bath towel into four double layers and lay the buttoned fastening face down on it, and the iron will move as easily over the buttons as over the buttonholes; also in ironing embroidery on the back use the towel on top of the ironing board, press the design in the wrong side, and it will stand out much better than when the towel is not used.
